“ My uncle Danny was not only my uncle but my friend as well. He gave me a love for video games at a young age and every summer when I came to visit he had a new one for me. As I got older and my interests shifted i spent a great deal of time with him at the shop where he would always drop what he was doing to answer my questions or give me some guidance on which ever project i had going at the time. Never once in my life did my uncle show any kind of frustration, annoyance, or doubt towards me even when I would snap a bolt off that he knew only he would be able to get out or when I had too much to drink one night and decided I was going to do wheelies in his chair only to flip it over 100 times and broke more than one piece off it, he just laughed and told me "Dont know why you cant figure it out it's easy" as he proceeded to wheelie and spin in circles. Only now do I realize how important his patience with me was to our relationship. My uncle danny taught me a lot about many aspects of life and I'm not sure if I've shared as many laughs or generally good times with anyone one else. To a true Savage, I love you and I'll miss you until I see you again. -Keegan-
